

Our Story

When our dad passed away, we tried to figure out what we could do with our lives and whether there was a way for us to honor him, together.

Our mother and our late father were missionaries who devoted most of their lives to aiding others, supporting them, meeting their needs willingly. Due to his selflessness, our dad would work on constructions, repairs, and whatever needs fixing just to help people. We would often tag along, assisting and lending a hand on his construction projects. Which is why creating Golden Hour, constructing this space, served as a therapeutic healing process for us. Reliving all those days we spent building with him, reminding ourselves who we've become from what we learned from him.
